the midst of a crisis. It is a brief book, which in its print form will be under 45 pages. I read it as a Kindle version. Just a note, as one might expect when something is rushed out like this to meet a need at the moment, there are some copy-editing issues (mainly a missing word here or there).

The main thing here is that Bruce addresses important existential questions -- our fears -- theological questions, rooted in Process and Relational Theologies, and deep spiritual questions, drawing on the mystics and Celtic spirituality. At a moment like this, we need words of encouragement. This should enlarge one's heart.

★★★★★ Exactly what's needed at this time!

The Reverend Bruce Epperly speaks directly to us with words of comfort and guidance during this unprecedented time of coronavirus. Ancient texts we have known for years are shown to be strong resources with which we can arm ourselves and -- with the necessary social distancing -- go out to fight the good fight. A fight which not at all paradoxically we fight with love. This book has helped me to relax, center and gird myself for loving outreach, action and achievement in the coming days and weeks.
