

ACTON INSTITUTE POWERBLOG

Rev. Sirico on Fox Business: Coronavirus helps us appreciate human relationships

by REV. BEN JOHNSON • April 13, 2020

Acton Institute President and Co-founder Rev. Robert A. Sirico was interviewed on Good Friday by Neil Cavuto on the Fox Business Channel.

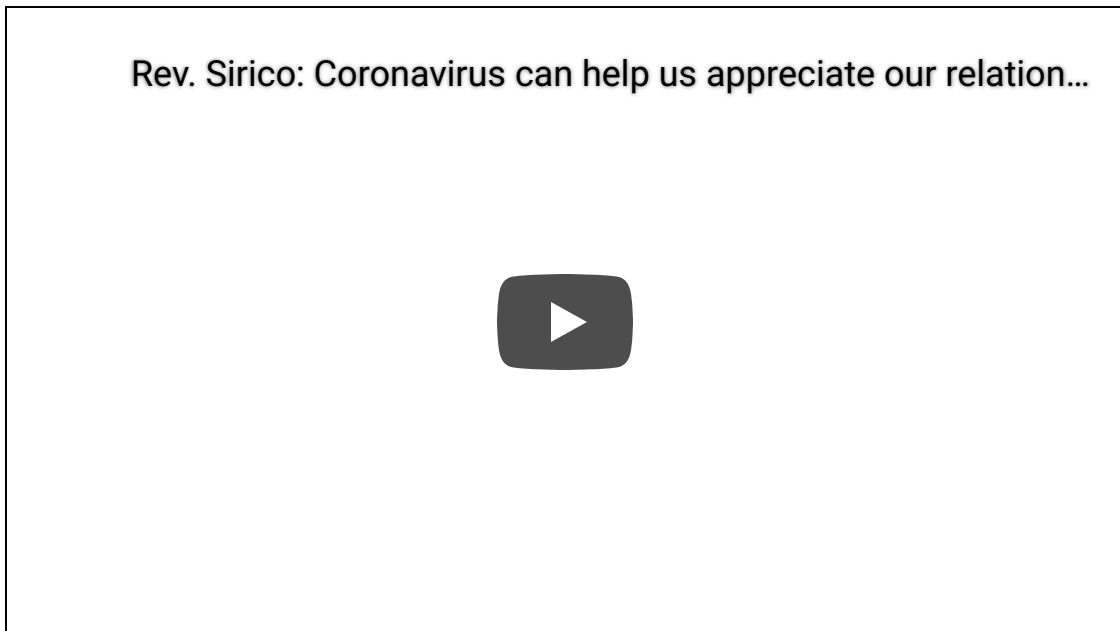

Cavuto said he has Rev. Sirico on his program during national crises, because his priestly perspective helps people find peace. Rev. Sirico also “avoids nastiness, which would make him a horrible cable TV host,” Cavuto joked.

Rev. Sirico—who is pastor of Sacred Heart of Jesus Catholic parish and Academy in Grand Rapids, Michigan—lived up to his billing.

“This virus is not going to destroy human civilization,” he said. “In that day when we emerge from this, we’re going to appreciate these relationships so much more.”

Rev. Sirico discussed ways to defuse tension within the home and in virtual relationships, and the positive practices that the COVID-19 global pandemic will ingrain in our culture after the threat subsides.

You can watch the video below:

REV. BEN JOHNSON

Rev. Ben Johnson is Executive Editor of the Acton Institute's flagship journal Religion & Liberty and edits its transatlantic website.

---

POSTED IN Covid-19, Video

TAGGED COVID-19, easter, Fox Business, Neil Cavuto, Rev. Robert Sirico

ABOUT

EVENTS

PUBLICATIONS

MULTIMEDIA

—

SHOP

DONATE

CONTACT US

---

Italiano | Español | Deutsch | Français | Português | 简体中文 | لعرربية

© 2017 Acton Institute | Privacy Policy